Else Lasker-Schüler: I have brought Love into the World ...

Transit Lounge Else/Lift to the Stars

Currently the internationally active Centre for Persecuted Arts (initiated by the Else-Lasker-Schüler-Society, Wuppertal, supported by the Regional Association of the Rhineland (LVR) and the City of Solingen) is being set up in Solingen. This institution, the only one in the world, does not only document the history of National Socialism and of exile, but also addresses the persecuted contemporary artists.

The way in which a state deals with its artists is a litmus test for democracy. Using the example of the poet Else Lasker-Schüler, the persecution and fate of an artist in exile is shown in all its aspects. In 1896, Else Lasker-Schüler was born in the Bergisches Land, the same area in which the Centre for Persecuted Arts is currently being set up. From there, she started out into the world. She locked Satan into Heaven and God into a smoking Hell and her poems are amongst the most beautiful in world literature. Else Lasker-Schüler also wrote in resistance against dictatorship and displacement. In 1945, she died in exile in Jerusalem.

The Project:

A live-performance, which is to guest in many cities of the world, ends in a multilingual sound installation in the Centre for the Persecuted Arts and culminates in a messenger for the freedom of art and communication. Else Lasker-Schüler magnificent poems form its core.

The spoken word is what counts / Check against delivery

Every artist who gives his voice to the project is part of a permanent art installation that can be experienced in its entirety only in the Centre of Persecuted Arts.

The actors Günter Lamprecht is not only participating but the patron of the whole nproject.

During the live performances new artists will be added as guests.

Transit Lounge Else/Lift to the Stars

is a process-based project that runs in different phases. At its core an actress (Claudia Gahrke) speaks poems by Else Lasker-Schüler live. The other performers in the project are fed in by computer via three other loudspeaker channels (narrated by international artists of all genres).The aim is a multilingual voice cosmos of 1000 + 1 voices (the one being Claudia Gahrke), which in its entirety, portrays Else Lasker-Schüler's poetic cosmos and becomes a chorus audible throughout the world campaigning for the freedom of art. Each of the performers who lends his/ her voice speaks a passage from a poem which he/she selected, in his/her native language.

Art in the Box/ Telephone Box

The final installation is a mutated phone box. In Transit Lounge Else/ Lift to the Stars, the members of the public can select every single one of the 1,000 + 1 tracks specifically by telephone. There is a telephone book with the track numbers of all the artists. You are connected to the whole world via the telephone receiver.

Centre for Persecuted Arts:

For this institution at the Kunstmuseum Solingen, the “Centre for Persecuted Arts GmbH” was founded in 2015 by the two Shareholders, the Regional Association of the Rhineland with 66% and the holding company of the City of Solingen with 33%. The location of this institution is the Kunstmuseum Solingen.

This “Centre” is an institution, the only one in the world, with pictures, books and personal documents from the German cultural history of the period from 1914 to 1989. The central topics are both German dictatorships of the 20th century and their consequences.

The art collection consists of the community foundation (around 500 images) from the Gerhard Schneider Collection (Sammlung Gerhard Schneider), acquired in 2004, and collections from the Kunstsammlung (Art Collection Solingen). This is primarily the „Georg-Meistermann-Collection“

(„Georg-Meistermann-Sammlung“). Georg Meistermann initiated the Bundeskunstsammlung (The Federal Art Collection) and his statement is the museum's guiding principle: “Exhibitions of works by both defamed and your artists should be organized annually and receive funding from the German Länder”...

The bridge between the persecution of literature and visual art is created by the painting poet Else Lasker-Schüler. The Centre received 23 original images from the Else-Lasker-Schüler-Society, which were confiscated as “degenerate” from the Berlin National Gallery in 1937. It is the largest collection of her drawings outside Israel. The Else-Lasker-Schüler-Foundation “Burned and Banned Poets/ Artists” has contributed the collection of exile literature “Sammlung Jürgen Serke”. The presentation concept is based on authors, whom the journalist Jürgen Serke has portrayed in his books „Die verbrannten Dichter“ (“The Burned Poets”), „Dichter, die eigenmächtig blieben in der DDR“ (“Writers Who Chose to Stay in the GDR”) and “Böhmische Dörfer” (“Bohemian Villages”).

Prior to the opening, international culture forums of the Else-Lasker-Schüler-Society, took place in Berlin, Israel, Poland, the Czech Republic, Switzerland, Italy and Austria. In exhibitions, the Museum/ Centre has presented itself in Belgium, France and in various cities in Germany. Patrons of more than 20 Else Lasker-Schüler-forums, who have “advertised” the Centre, among others were: the State Presidents/ Ministers Václav Havel, Ezer Weizman, Shimon Peres, Johannes Rau, Wladyslaw Bartoszewski, Aurélie Filippetti and Mary Robinson, UN- High Commissioner for Human Rights.
